oftentimes makes us overshoot our Reason, and forfeit our Prudence, in reckoning that our own, that is not so much as in Being. But this Proverb deborts us from speaking confidently of our having, or as good as having Things in our Power or Poſſion, which are far off ſtill, only in Expectancy, and depend wholly upon Providence; and not as the Latins ſay, Ante victoriam contrarium triumphum: And the Greeks, Πρὸ τῆς φωνῆς αὐγαίου τον λοπάδα.

Many talk of Robin Hood, who never shot in his Bow.

[This Robin Hood was a famous Robber, and storied to be an expert Archer in the Time of Richard the First, about the Year 1200; his principal Haunt was about Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire.] This Proverb is applicable to all ignorant Pretenders and Braggadocio's whatsoever, either in Knowledge or Business. It intimates, that Bragging and Boasting are common Imperinences in Conversation, equally among Travellers and Soldiers, as well as Poets and Painters, who never out-did Nature yet, but only in the Lye. But they who pretend themselves to be what they are not, will always be prating of what they do not know, So, Non omnes qui Citharam tenent, Citharædæ sunt, say the Latins; Πολλοὶ μὲν νὰρ θανάφροι, παυροὶ δὲ τὲ βαυχοὶ, the Greeks; and Molti parlan di Orlando, chi non videro, mai suo brando, the Italians.

Robin Hood's Pennyworth.

This Proverb is usually applied to such as having gotten any Thing dishonestly, sell it at a Price much below the Value, according to the Proverb, Lightly come, lightly go; and Robin Hood is alluded to, because, being an expert Archer, and so coming easily by it, he could afford to sell Venison as cheap as Neck-Beef; according to the Latins, Aurea pro Æreis, and the Greeks, χρυσέα χαλκείων. But others, on the contrary, apply it to such as would buy lumping Pennyworths, still alluding to Robin, but upon another Consideration, viz his being a Robber; who, though, as Camden calls him, Prædonem mitissimum, the most gentle and generous of Thieves, when Cash run low, would have what he wanted at his own Rate, which his Chapmen were forced to take, or else he would have it for nothing.

Persons, to do those Things, which will in the Consequence sensibly affect themselves, while they design them only for others, deeming themselves secure: As also such revengeful Spirits, who prosecute their private Resentments against others with such an unwary Precipitateness, that the heaviest Part of the Punishment frequently falls to their Share. Οὐτ' αὐτῶ κακὰ τεύχε' ἀνὴρ ἄλλω τεύχε' αἰ, say the Greeks; and Ἐπὶ σεαυτῶ τὴν σελήνην καλεῖς, In tuum ipsius caput lunam deducis, Latin.

STABLE Stand [Old Law] one of the four Evidences, whereby a Man is convicted of intending to steal the King's Deer, i. e. when he is found standing in a Forest with his Bow bent, ready to shoot; or close by a Tree with Greyhounds ready to let slip; the other three being Back-berond, Bloody-band, and Dog-draw.

When the Steerd's Hosen shut the Stable Door.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careless Groom, but has a more extended Aim; it intimates, that 'tis a mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumstances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event, to our great Shame and Damage. This is generally the Wisdom of the World, when the Thing is over, we are as wise as Experience can make us. Almost all the Miscarriages of Mankind are for want of Thinking: After-Wit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Misfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foresight; an After-thought may inhanee our Trouble, but can't relieve our Distress; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but it cannot make any Satisfaction for what is past. Serrar la Stalla quando s'ban perduti buovi, say the Italians. Il est temps de fermer l'estable quand les Chevaux en sont allez, the French. Quando quidem accepto claudenda est janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better steal a Horse, than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not justify stealing at all; it means very honestly, and is only a smart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgment as publick Trials. It intimates, that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws against Oppression and Robbery in their own Hands, little Thieves only go to pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are punished with Death at the Gallows, while great Offenders live safe and secure under the Helm of Government. This Proverb is for doing all People Justice alike, from the highest to the lowest, and in all Cases whatsoever, either of Desert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age; Coxening is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler way of stealing now than only to take a Man's Horse from under him on the Highway, and a little loose Money out of his Pocket; our Rapparees are Men of better Breeding and Fashion, and scorn to play at such small Game, they sweep away a noble Estate with one slight Brush, and bid both the Gallows and Horse-Pond Defiance; and the Mob is not always just in this Point, for one Pickpocket deserves a Horse-pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Cloaths. But, Dat veniam Corvis, vexat Censura Columbas, say the Latins.

He steals a Goose, and gives the Siblets in Alms.

This Proverb points at such Persons, who by Acts of Injustice, Oppression, and Fraud, amass to themselves large Estates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing some charitable Acts while they are alive, or when they can no longer possess them, by leaving their Lands in Mortmain to pious and charitable Uses, as building and endowing Hospitals, Alms-houses, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Christian Charity) but they who think by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly disparaging the Justice of the Almighty. Parallel to this is the Hebrew Adage, נפא בהחורין ומחקה לבישא.

A WELL [in the Military Art] is a Depth which the Miner sinks into the Ground to prepare a Mine, or find out and disappoint the Enemies Mines.

Well begun is half ended.

All the Actions and Enterprizes of Mankind labour under the Reflection of this quaint moral Sentence, whether they be prudent or imprudent in the Undertaking, and good or bad in the Accomplishment. It intimates that Persons should be very deliberate and advised in the Beginning of an Undertaking; for that to begin well is the only Way to quicken and dispatch the End, let it be what it will. It intimates that there is a great deal of Difficulty in beginning well, and that a false Step at first Start is hardly to be recovered afterwards: That the Work does not cost half so much Trouble as the Design of it; that it is an easy Matter to make way when the Ice is broke. It reflects upon false Foundations and foolish Projects, and it holds good from Morality and worldly Affairs to Religion, That a good Beginning is a fair Step to a good Ending. Dimidium facti, qui bene cepit habet, say the Latins; and ἀρχὴ ἡμισυ παντός. Arist.

All is well that ends well.

It is plain Matter of Fact, that the End crowns all Things, and that every Thing is not to be judged amiss that may appear so for the present. A worldly Misfortune, if it quickens our Diligence and Industry; a severe Fit of Sickness, if it promotes our Piety, and makes us amend our Lives, is well; tho' for the present no Affliction seems joyous but grievous: For a happy Death is the never-failing Portion of a well spent Life, which always ends in eternal Bliss and Glory. The best way of judging of Things beyond Mistake is by the Issue or Event of them. Finis coronat Opus, say the Latins; Ende wohl, alles wohl, say the Germans; and ἀλκυονίδας ἡσέρας αἶσι, the Greeks.

YOUNGER [geongen, Sax. Jonger, Belg. Jünger, T. Junior, L.] more young. The younger Brother the better Gentleman.

Tho' this Proverb contradicts their Notions, who think such Persons only the best Gentlemen, who had the largest Estates, and it being the Custom of England for the eldest Son to go away with the whole Patrimony, it may to them seem a Paradox; but as it is grounded on a different Notion, so there have been, and are plentiful Instances to confirm the Truth of it; for while the Elder Brother of a House, depending upon his Estate, is either indulged by Parents, or gives up himself to an indolent Humour, so that his Soul in his Body, like a Sword in the Scabbard, rusts for want of Use, thinking it sufficient, if he have only the Accomplishments of a Fox-Hunter, or a Country Justice; the Younger Brother being put to his Shifts, having no Inheritance to depend upon, by plying to his Studies hard at home, and accomplishing himself by Travels abroad, oftentimes either by Arts or Arms, raises himself to a conspicuous Pitch of Honour, and so becomes much the better Gentleman; for 'tis Manners makes a Man, which was the usual Motto of William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester, Founder of the College there, and New College at Oxford, inscribed on the Places of his Founding.

 who lived about 400 Years before our Sa-its Infancy, to a great Perfection. He growing very rich would at last sell none of his Works, but gave them away, saying,

He did not know how to set a Price upon them equal to their Value. He painted a Bunch of Grapes so to the Life, that the Birds came and peck'd them, and afterwards having painted a Boy holding a Bunch of Grapes, which the Birds also flew to and peck'd, he was angry, and ingenuously confessed that his Work was not compleat, in that if he had drawn the Boy as well as he had done the Grapes, the Birds would have been afraid of him. And having disputed with Parrhasius, which was the best Painter, Parrhasius painted a Curtain so ingeniously, that Zeuxis taking it for a real one which hid the Antagonist's Work, desired it might be drawn, that he might see what he had done; but coming to know his Mistake, he acknowledged he was outdone, since himself had deceived none but Birds, but Parrhasius

ZODIACK [Ζωδιακός, so called of ζῷον, Gr. i. e. of the living Creatures that are imagined to be in it, or the Figures of them; or of το ζῶν, Gr. because it is believed to afford Life and Heat to Animals] is one of the greatest imaginary Circles of the Heavens, which passes obliquely between the two Poles of the World; 'tis cut into two equal Parts, by the Equator, one of which comprehends the six Northern Signs towards the Arctick Pole, and the other the six Southern Signs towards the Antarctick Pole; it is furnished with twelve Constellations represented upon Globes, by the Figure of twelve living Creatures. The Sun goes about this Circle once every Year, and the Moon once a Month, and in the Middle of it is the Ecliptick Line, from which the Sun never departs; but the Moon and Planets wander up and down for the Space of eight Degrees, and sometimes more in both.

ZODIACK of the Comets. Mr. Cassini hath observed a certain Tract in the Heavens, within whose Bounds (by many Observations) he hath found most Comets, but not all to keep; this he makes as broad as the other Zodiac, and marks it with Signs or Constellations like that, which are Antinous, Pegasus, Andromeda, Taurus, Orion, the lesser Dog, Hydra, the Centaur, Scorpion and Sagittary.

The Frigid or Frozen ZONES [so called of Frigidus, L. i. e. exceeding cold; because, being extremely remote from the Sun's Course in the Ecliptick, they partake of but little of its Heat] are those comprehended between the Pole and the Polar Circle; therefore one must be towards the North, and the other towards the South: The Frozen or Frigid Zone towards the North, lying between the North Polar Circle and the North Pole, contains Part of Iceland and Norway, Lapland, Finmark, Samoseda, Nova Zembla, Greenland, and some other Parts of North-America; the Frigid Zone towards the South, lying between the South Polar Circle and the South Pole, is not yet known, whether it be Land or Water.

The Temperate ZONES owe their Name and Advantages to their Situation between the Torrid and the two Frigid Zones; the one on the North Side of the Equator, between the Arctick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Cancer, in which we live, is called the Northern; and the other between the Antarctick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Capricorn, is called the Southern; each of them taking up 42 Degrees, or about 2580 Miles in Breadth.

The Torrid ZONE [so called of Torridus, L. i. e. parching or burning; because under the Sun's Road, the Beams fall directly on it, and continually cause so excessive an Heat, that the Ancients thought it uninhabitable] is bounded by the Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn, lies in the Middle of the two Temperate Zones, and is divided by the Equator into two equal Parts, the one Northern, and the other Southern; its Breadth being 47 Degrees, or about 2820 Miles.
